THIRD SUNDAY OF LENT [Year B]

Sunday 7th March, 2021

First Reading: Exodus 20 1-17 – The law was given through Moses.

Responsorial Psalm: Lord, you have the words of everlasting life.

Second Reading: 1 Corinthians 1:22-25 We are preaching a crucified Christ, a scandal to many, but to those who have been called, the wisdom of God.

Gospel Acclamation: Praise to you, Lord Jesus Christ, king of endless glory! God loved the world so much, he gave us his only Son, that all who believe in him might have eternal life. Praise to you, Lord Jesus Christ, king of endless glory!

Gospel: John 2:13-25 Destroy this sanctuary, and in three days I will raise it up.

“I am the Lord your God who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of slavery”

These are the first words of today's reading from Exodus which then proceeds to the proclamation of the ten commandments. This first line is a powerful statement in itself as it opens up the true reason for the commandments leading us toward freedom from slavery. God addresses this plan to a free people, and thus the commands are instructions about how to maintain their freedom and protect their community and their relationship with God. We can walk our journey through life without ever breaking any of the commandments in a serious way, so maybe it's time to reflect on an interpretation that walks with us through life. Let's look from the point of view that brings freedom rather than slavery.

- Ψ You shall have no other gods except me. An invitation to think about what we give priority to in our lives. What are the ways we acknowledge God's love and mercy for us in our daily living?
- Ψ You shall not take the Lord's name in vain. Do our words proclaim the good news? Are they such that reveal the wonder of resurrection or are we stuck at Good Friday? Do we build up or tear down as the voice of Christ?
- Ψ Remember the Sabbath and keep it holy. Going to Mass is only one way of keeping the Sabbath holy. Do we take time to breath in the gift of the day. To pause and allow the gift of 24 hours to seep into our bones – to choose to live mindfully, thoughtfully, and in gratitude.
- Ψ Honour your father and mother. We are wonderfully made – a combination of both of our parents. In remembering the gifts that have been handed on to us do we acknowledge the goodness of our heritage? What lessons – for positive growth – have we learnt from our parents. Some lessons of life come from learning to choose other paths than our parents.
- Ψ You shall not kill. What does it mean though to “kill” another's reputation by talking about them in a judgmental or criticising way...or... choosing to “kill” someone from being in our lives because of their viewpoint or their lifestyle choices?
- Ψ You shall not commit adultery. What does it mean to spend more time with mates at the pub then with family? To not include the people who love us in our lives, or only when we choose to.
- Ψ You shall not steal. Maybe at times we steal the happiness from another. By this I mean we refuse to allow people to celebrate their good fortune. Someone once said that a true definition of being humble is when we are as happy for someone else who achieves success as if it had happened to us.
- Ψ You shall not bear false witness. Do we stand up for others, or do we simply agree, and add to the opinions of those we are with?
- Ψ You shall not covet your neighbor's wife, or goods? Jealousy can be a difficult thing to control. Do we covet the opinion that people have of others that seems to be a better opinion than about ourselves?

Maybe this could be another way of examining our conscience as we journey through lent leading us to a new way of living and understanding freedom.

May God bless you on your Lenten walk with God. Fr. Michael

Taking time to Prepare and Reflect

For next Sunday..... the 4th Sunday Lent

Gospel Jn 3:14-21

Jesus said to Nicodemus:

'The Son of Man must be lifted up as Moses lifted up the serpent in the desert, so that everyone who believes may have eternal life
in him.

Yes, God loved the world so much that he gave his only Son, so that everyone who believes in him may not be lost but may have eternal life.

For God sent his Son into the world
not to condemn the world,
but so that through him the world might be saved.

No one who believes in him will be condemned;
but whoever refuses to believe is condemned already,
because he has refused to believe in the name of God's only Son.

On these grounds is sentence pronounced:
that though the light has come into the world
men have shown they prefer darkness to the light because their deeds were evil.

And indeed, everybody who does wrong hates the light and avoids it for fear his actions should be exposed;
but the man who lives by the truth
comes out into the light, so that it may be plainly seen that what he does is done in God.'

Reflecting on the Gospel

In modern culture, Sundays are often punctuated with football games. We know that Mass attendance can be influenced by the time and location of big game days, and that even the best-intentioned Mass-goers can become distracted by the excitement, joy, and anticipation of the game.

This Fourth Sunday of Lent is traditionally called "Laetare Sunday," from the Latin meaning "to rejoice" or "to be joyful." It might seem odd to "rejoice" in Lent, but that exhortation is a reminder, or rather a foreshadowing, of Easter. It is as though Easter itself is breaking into the Lenten season this Sunday.

The gospel continues from last week with another reading from John that includes the famous passage often cited in football game end zones and roadside billboards (John 3:16). The first two Sundays of Lent we heard Mark (the temptation of Jesus, and the transfiguration of Jesus). Last week was John's version of Jesus overturning the money changers in the temple. Today we have Jesus and Nicodemus, a story unique to this gospel.

The passage that many use to sum up the gospel is simply this: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only Son." The profundity of this statement can be lost by its pithiness. We proclaim a God of love, not a God of condemnation. And this love results in God sending his only Son, Jesus. The starting point of our theology then, is, love. Though many today and throughout history seem to prefer a God of judgment, a God of condemnation, today we are reminded that our God is love. And God's love is eternal, expressed in a never-ending life he wants for each of us, where the relationships and bonds we create in this life are never broken.

On this Laetare Sunday, where we read John 3:16, may the joy experienced by those at a football game remind us of the joy we have at Easter, when the promise of eternal life is fulfilled.

The gospel addresses eternal life quite clearly as God's intention for us. But prior to that famous passage (John 3:16), we hear Jesus tell Nicodemus that the Son of Man must be lifted up (crucified). Only by means of death is eternal life opened. Unique to this gospel, Jesus' death is often referred to in metaphorical ways, like "lifted up" or even "glorified." For the Gospel of John, Jesus on the cross was a moment of glory, almost devoid of explicit suffering. For example, John never mentions the scourging of Jesus. Even Jesus' final words from the cross, "I thirst," can be taken more as metaphorical or symbolic than a literal expression of suffering.

Ultimately John does not focus on Jesus' pain. Instead, the cross is glory and the path to eternal life. For his followers, belief in Jesus is the means by which they receive eternal life. As we journey through Lent, it might be fruitful for us too to focus on Jesus and our belief in him. He represents and is himself the incarnation of God's love for the world.

How does living a faith based on love and trust differ from living a faith based on condemnation and fear?

As followers of Jesus, how do we represent God's love for the world?

How have you unexpectedly experienced the grace and mercy of God?
